Biography

After serving as an Associate in Missions for over seven years, Colleen Carter received her intermediate missionary appointment to Ghana in September 2007. Arriving on the field in February 2010, she immediately thrust herself into the work and picked up several of the duties she had as an AIMer.

She is the coordinator of Pass the Word printing office, an instructor at African Center for Theological Studies, a Sunday school teacher, a children's ministry regional coordinator, and secretary/treasurer of the West Africa sub-region. In February 2012 she moved from the capital of Accra to Tamale in the northern region. She continues to work throughout this highly Islamic part of the country through the aforementioned tasks, plus builds churches and coordinates the Africa Aflame literature publications for Africa.

When Colleen returns to the field, she will continue to diligently work for the Lord through her training ministry of teaching and preparing materials to be taught.
